WOMAN'S WORLD.

SOCIETY GIRLS ARE NOW DANCING WITHOUT THE YOUNG MEN.

The Girls Too Shakes—Society's May Party—Athletic New York Women—Cleaning Parlor—Nine Women Lawyers—Sterilized Milk for the Sick Poor.

The girl of the period has grown recklessly independent. Now the independent young woman has all at once taken it into her head to take a very big step again in the direction of what she is pleased to call equality. What until quite recently was a ball or a dance without dancing men? A failure, and a thing of which a hostess stood in greater dread than of failure of the piece de resistance at the dinner or supper table. The dancing man knew his value, and tried to augment it by giving himself the air of a martyr when entering a ball-room; the girl suffered him for awhile in this character, and then—since she has grown so very energetic and independent—determined to do without him.

Now she gives a skirt dance or a minuet with a beautiful impartiality that deserves admiration, and the men may as well stay away as they please—it is immaterial to the girls. Girls dance after a dinner party as formerly they gave a song. You see, the style of dress that is required for these dances is almost identical with the ordinary dinner dress. A dress with a train does beautifully for a minuet, and the umbrella shaped skirt of this season is just the right thing for skirt dancing. It must be twelve yards wide, so that it can be gracefully taken up by the dancer, but as fashions go that is no extraordinary width.

It is not only the daring few who have the heart to perform singly before a drawing room of spectators. Skirt dancing has been very general indeed at this season's dancing.

One thing which is greatly in favor of skirt dancing is the fact that it is so much more artistic and beautiful than the ordinary round dances. But this is not the chief reason of its popularity. Men are very lazy. They won't dance, and it gets more and more difficult to get them to learn and practice dancing. Girls, on the other hand, are extremely fond of it. Of course two girls can dance a round dance together, and I have often seen it done, but it does not look well. With step dancing and skirt dancing it is quite different. It looks very charming if two girls dance a minuet or a national dance, or if one girl alone does skirt dancing. It makes them entirely independent of men as partners in a dance, and that, of course, is of the greatest advantage.—New York Press.

A Plucky Woman Beats Off Two Sharks. Australian mail news brings intelligence from Melbourne of a thrilling adventure between two large sharks and some ladies and children bathers at the Mentone ladies' baths there. There were a number of ladies and children in the baths, among them being Mrs. Percy Macneikan, Mrs. French and their two little girls. Mrs. Percy Macneikan was the first to venture in the water, taking with her her little girl Roy and Mrs. French's daughter. The bathers went out as far as the rope which stretches across the open area. There they dived and swam, and the children frolicked in glee. Mrs. Macneikan saw the little girls safely swinging upon the rope in three feet of water and then went into deeper parts.

At this stage Mrs. French's little boy, who was not bathing, noticed a large shark rapidly approaching the party, and immediately told Mrs. Durrant. The boy then called out to Mrs. Macneikan that there was a shark in the water. She glanced around and with horror saw a shark turning over within a foot of her. She kicked and splashed and nearly fainted away. The shark made for the children, going between the rope and the shore. Mrs. Macneikan speedily recovered her presence of mind and darted to the rescue of the children. Quickly securing Roy this brave lady placed the child in about a foot of water. Then she turned to secure Mrs. French's child. She was just in time to effect the rescue. As she grasped the little one and was making for the shore the shark, with a big companion, made a dash.

The undaunted woman succeeded in frightening the monsters away, and safely bore the children from all danger. Mrs. Macneikan was much exhausted after her terrible adventure. The battle between life and death was most exciting, and two ladies fainted. The sharks were fine specimens, the largest one being about twelve feet in length and the other about six feet. The pair had effected an entrance into the baths through some broken pickets. Some men were subsequently called in and succeeded in killing the smaller one.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Sorosis Holds a May Party. Sorosis had a May party Monday, of which the principal features were a dainty luncheon and a discussion on high art, interspersed with songs by Mrs. Mary C. Ball and Mrs. A. B. Taylor, and recitations by Miss Chase and Mrs. Bell. Mrs. Alice Shaw, the whistler, gave an interesting exhibition of her peculiar gift to the great delight of the Sorosis women, and three young girls—Misses Pauline, Bertha and Julia Blakely—interpreted a selection from Strauss on the violin, cello, violin and piano. Among the honored guests were Mrs. Meers, of the Spokane Falls Sorosis; Miss Clark, editor of The Animal Magazine; Mrs. and Miss Slavens, Mrs. Edward Eggleston, Mrs. Bachus, of the Brooklyn Woman's club; Mrs. Charles Briggs, Miss Archer, Mrs. Barent de Klyn, Jr., and Mrs. Frank E. Conover.

Mrs. Louise M. Thomas, a former president of Sorosis, who was chosen by the Red Cross society to accompany the Red Cross relief to Russia and to study the condition and achievements of women in different countries on the Continent, for a report to be read at the World's fair said, in farewell to her sisterhood, that the honor she esteemed most lightly was that she had been appointed to this work as a typical American woman, well grounded in the principles of American government, which she believed in, and is to be a power among the nations. She said, too, that she considered it significant of the important mission women are to have in the world that people were so interested in what women were doing, the books they were writing, and the place they fill in the industrial pursuits of nations. Mrs. Isabel Bird Chalmers presented the question of the day, "Is Color Essential to Beauty in Art and Life?" in a carefully and cleverly written paper analyzing the idea of beauty, the purpose of color, the value of form, and the relation of color to music.—New York Sun.

Athletic New York Women. The women of New York have been steadily increasing in stature and in breadth, and this year shows a marked increase over last year. The athletic young woman, with shoulders erect and long waist and long legs and a sturdy stride, predominated. And she has outgrown the men. She towers above them. She smiles condescendingly down at them. She threatens to forget that they exist. In the Easter parade the men who came to see, either saw afar off or kept their chins at a most undignified elevation. It is unfortunate that the whole country cannot see these Easter parades. Those who have watched the fashionable crowds in other cities must have noticed how ill garments often sit upon the women, how much of the "dressed up" look there is, and above all how few of the women walk well or look out of their eyes with that serene expression of confidence and good health which is a characteristic of New York women.

It has been said that the American woman is the best dressed woman in the world. And it seems that this means the New York women, for surely nowhere else could one have seen so much that is beautiful, so much that is artistic and attractive and so little that is vulgar or pretentious as in the crowd that thronged the avenue that afternoon.—New York Cur. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It is the fashion now to leave the neck perfectly bare for evening dress. Even jewels are relegated chiefly to the hair and corsage. It is a charming mode for young girls.

Patents recently granted to women include a sewing machine, an ice machine, a sliding window and a needle employed in the manufacture of felted fabrics.

In Bombay sixty-two native girls have been admitted to the Medical college within the past six years, and several of these are now qualified practitioners.

The French societies of women have formed a federation similar to our National council, and is to hold its national congress yearly.

THE PEOPLE'S MOVEMENT.

Independent newspapers, that is those that are not published in the shadow or under the influence of Wall Street, are commenting upon the magnitude and spontaneity of the popular uprising in favor of free coinage. The sentiment against the plutocrats of Wall Street is universal. In every State there is a demand for remonetization of silver. The cry for free coinage is as loud in the agricultural States of the Mississippi Valley as in the mining States of the inter-mountain region. Experience has proved that the depreciation in the price of silver affects every profession and business in the country; that the loss to those engaged in other industries is as great as to the silver miner.

To-day, under the Sherman Commodity Act, the miner is being robbed to prevent a deficiency in the Treasury. Over one hundred millions of dollars, which rightfully belong to the bullion producers, has by iniquitous legislation been transferred to the credit of the Government, yet the howl is raised that the Treasury is being despoiled for the benefit of the silver miner. The farm laborer and the factory operative are told by the lying minions of the gold bugs that free coinage would impose upon them a 70-cent dollar instead of the 100-cent dollar they are now receiving for wages, though every person at all conversant with the subject knows better. With the mints open to silver as well as gold the silver dollar would have a fixed value of 100 cents. Then if the dollar was melted accidentally or otherwise the metal would be worth 90 cents at the mint, whereas, to-day, in consequence of the demonetization Act, the bullion in a standard dollar is worth about 83 1/2 cents and the Government will not even pay that price for it except through a broker. The fact is the free coinage of silver instead of depreciating the value of the dollar will restore it from 68 to 100 cents and give it a fixed value at that price. It would give tens of thousands of persons employment and constantly increase the imperishable wealth of the nation by increasing not only silver money but the gold money, as there is a greater or less per centage of gold in nearly all the silver produced.

The masses of the people, except in the far East where partisan prejudice has dimmed their perceptive faculties, are demanding more money and therefore favor free coinage. They ask that silver be restored to the place as a precious metal assigned it by the constitution. No nation that existed in historic times ever had too much or enough of it. In the most populous countries of the world it is legal tender. Europe does not produce enough of the metal for use in the arts much less for monetary purposes, and yet the United States, the greatest silver producing nation on the globe, through Wall Street, permits the bankers and money changers of Europe to fix the price of the metal so that they can make the greatest profit in hauling it at a proportionate loss to a large majority of our citizens.

Why is it that any American citizen possessed of ordinary intelligence and not in the service of Wall Street as an organ or Government official should uphold individual or party that is not unequivocally in favor of free coinage, can only be accounted for on the assumption that some persons delight in being contrary and labor under the mistaken notion that the success of party is preferable to State prosperity.

BLAINE AND HARRISON.

Yesterday Secretary Blaine sent his resignation to the President, who, believing that he meant it, promptly accepted it and Mr. Blaine is no longer a member of the Cabinet. This has been construed to signify that Mr. Blaine's letter to Chairman Clarkson of the Republican National Committee was simply a political move to throw other candidates off their guard so that his friends could control the National Convention and give him the nomination. Chauncey M. Depew, an original Blaine man, combats this view of the matter and declares that having always been a Blaine man he was entitled to receive an intimation if there was any intention on the part of Blaine to be a candidate, and having received no intimation he had taken the Clarkson letter as final and does not believe that Blaine will be a candidate.

Harrison has assumed direction of the campaign himself and his supporters declare that if they cannot nominate him they can prevent the nomination of Blaine without practically confessing that his February letter to Clarkson was but a shrewd move to secure the nomination. Blaine delights in surprises. He may leave the country before the convention meets, or possibly accept the nomination should it be tendered him. He is more popular in the West than Harrison, but the latter carried New York and Indiana, both of which are essential to Republican success, and Blaine did not.

A SILVER LEAGUE CONVENTION.

The Silver Leagues in the various counties of the State are considering the question of holding a State Convention in Reno early in July. The National Conventions of the two old parties and of the People's party will have been held by that time so that the Leagues will know exactly what they have to do. The Executive Committees of the several local leagues, are requested to take action upon the matter and determine when the convention shall be held and the basis for representation in the convention. The attendance should be large so that every mining camp and agricultural valley and village in the State will be represented and a full and free discussion of the situation can be had. The Republican State Convention at Virginia City and the Democratic State Convention at Winnemucca were not representative bodies, as only a few hundred votes were polled at the primaries of either party. Let the silver men hold a convention composed of at least one hundred and fifty delegates representing a large majority of the voters of the State, all the electors in fact, in some counties and present a striking contrast to the other conventions in which there was not interest enough taken by the masses of the people to vote for or against delegates.

BY TELEGRAPH.

Blaine Seemingly the General Favorite.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 4.—The name of Blaine is on every lip to-night and is about in the lobbies. It is whispered in conferences and sung in rhymes by exultant admirers as they parade the streets. His magic name has kindled the latent enthusiasm of the North-west into a blaze of glory. Everywhere it is "Blaine, Blaine, James G. Blaine," now that he has resigned and thrown down the gauntlet. No man asserts to-night that Blaine will decline the nomination. It is Blaine against Harrison and all political weapons of factional warfare are ushered into the contest. The Harrison people openly accuse Blaine of perfidy, bad faith and treachery to the Administration. The Blaine leaders reply that Blaine owed nothing to the Administration and that the Administration, which he honored, could have no possible mortgage on his political future. While the great majority to-night predict Blaine's nomination some think the imbroglio will result in the selection of a dark horse. Harrison leaders are not disheartened but still resolute and eager for the fray. Nearly everybody confesses a merry fight in store, and nearly everybody seems to find pleasure in contemplation.

The first intimation of Blaine's resignation and acceptance of the same by the President came through the Associated Press bulletins, and when officially confirmed the Blaine men gave a wild, hilarious hurrah. Thousands of faces were turned upward from the hotel lobby and as many voices inquired the cause of the outburst. "Blaine has resigned," shouted National Committee men. Instantly the news was communicated to the outside and like wildfire enthusiasm spread through the city. Blaine leaders seemed to congregate by magic and as they exchanged felicitations the countenances of Clarkson and Fessett beamed with pleasure and even immovable Quay was manifestly exultant. An hour later the Blaine headquarters were engaged in the West Hotel and the fight was on. At the Harrison headquarters dismay at first was pictured on every face but Consul General New, but quickly rallying, his lieutenants closed the doors for a few minutes' consultation and when the leaders stepped out again the line of battle was drawn. Instead of an eulogy the ex-Secretary was accused of bad faith and the Harrison people still maintained that they had sufficient votes to nominate their man. The news of Blaine's resignation at first created a feeling among the Harrison men that it meant the defeat of their candidate. Later there was talk of bringing out a dark horse but that feeling has now given away and whatever else the Harrison men may do it can be stated positively they will stand to their guns to the last.

A representative of the Associated Press called at Blaine's residence shortly after the correspondence was made public and asked him to supplement it with an explanation. Blaine smilingly but deliberately replied: "The correspondence explains itself and I have not another word to add to it." The President was next called upon and asked if he was willing to say anything regarding the correspondence. His response, though courteous, was equally emphatic. He said, "Nothing whatever." The President and Blaine are seemingly in excellent spirits, and each, after declining to talk upon the event of the day or its effect, turned the conversation to other topics with marked composure. Blaine's appearance and manner were especially noticeable as indicative of a feeling of relief and satisfaction, which made him buoyantly cheerful. Secretary Foster showed no excitement over the news of Blaine's resignation and declined positively to say anything at present regarding the political situation. Attorney General Miller and Secretary Noble also declined to be interviewed on the subject. It is understood the unusual reticence of the officers of the Government is due to a suggestion from the President, as he preferred Federal officers to avoid comment on the subject.

The Harrison forces held a conference this afternoon and issued a declaration which states that after full discussion of the situation among Harrisonians, every State and Territory being represented, it was the unanimous opinion that Blaine's resignation would not effect a canvass being made for the President.

Senator Wolcott of Colorado says Blaine's resignation may help Harrison, as it leaves vacant another office to peddle for Harrison votes. Harrison could not carry Colorado or the Northwest. Colorado is for Blaine.

Blaine's Resignation.

WASHINGTON, June 4.—Blaine's resignation was taken to the White House by his Private Secretary, who put it in the hands of the President about 1 o'clock. Soon after reading it, the President descended to the east room and had the usual Saturday afternoon public reception. Two hundred persons were present, none of whom, as they shook the President's hand, could have told from his cool, collected manner that anything unusual had happened. Indeed, the President seemed in better spirits than usual and made felicitous replies to the greetings of visitors. After the reception the President returned to the library and addressed a letter to Blaine accepting his resignation, and gave it to Private Secretary Halford, with instructions to deliver it at once. Halford took it to Blaine's house and placed it in his hands. This is the whole transaction.

THE FACTOR OF SAFETY.

Cheapness Not an Inducement for Investment in All Cases.

The greatest bridge of the ages is to be built across North river. Any reputable engineer can plan the bridge; but yet only the greatest genius can plan a bridge that will prove a financial success. It will be worth millions to the board of directors to have found the one or two engineers in the world, who can plan it so that it will be neither too cheap nor too costly.

The difficulty of the problem does not lie in building a bridge that will do a certain fixed amount of work under certain fixed conditions. Nor does it consist in building a bridge that will be certain to stand any unforeseen strain put upon it.

But it will consist in securing safety at the least possible cost.

The element that will require the greatest knowledge of exact weights and strains, together with a splendid imaginative comprehension of the precise limit of unforeseen weights and unknown strains, is the element in the engineer's capacity that will settle the success or failure of what he will build.

IF HE STOP A HAIR'S BREADTH

This side a proper calculation of the factor of safety against the possible forces of nature, the time is sure to come when the whole structure will lie a fatal mass of wreck and ruin.

If he, out of too much timidity, make the bridge really stronger than need be for the most strain that will be put upon it, he is saddling the company with a useless load of cost and expense, which in this case would probably prove its financial failure.

Again, this factor of safety, as it is called, will probably be the costliest part of the bridge. After the architect has provided for the total amount of traffic over the bridge, the probabilities are that he will count upon double the cost of this part, to provide for the factor of safety.

It is precisely so in Life Insurance and in purchasing it.

Cheap Life Insurance cannot possibly provide for the factor of security. Under ordinary circumstances and at certain times, companies which have gone upon the cheap basis may seem to be sound and sensible. They may allure the uninformed or unwary to take stock in them, by a bold appeal to their seeming economy.

But any man is simply foolish who does not calculate an existence of at least fifty years for any company wherein he wishes to insure. During those fifty years there are sure to be, as experience uniformly proves, epidemics, panics, probably wars, and even revolutions, which are as certain to destroy all insurance companies not planned to meet just such crises, as the

NORTH RIVER BRIDGE

Would be sure to crash to its ruin if its engineer, for the purpose of building it cheaply, stopped in his calculations this side the inevitable effects of the tremendous, although rare, tests arising from the forces of nature.

Every sensible man who thinks of buying Life Insurance should ask the question, and accept nothing less than actual demonstration, "What is the FACTOR OF SAFETY in this company?"

It will not do to trust to "guess work" or "taking chances" or "glib promises;" he should demand evidence.

But he should go further than this. He should also demand some fair proof that he is not buying his security against panics or sudden crises at too high rates.

There is just as much truth in the statement that one can pay too much for Life Insurance, as that one can pay too little, although of course the latter is much worse than the former.

A company worked on too cheap a basis is sure to give nothing back for good money but delusive talk; whereas, a too expensive company has something to fall back upon, in the way of unnecessary surplus.

But in either case a blunder is committed and the insurer suffers.

Very well, then, how is one to find out the best way to buy the factor of safety, at the precise point of least cost?

Certainly the board of directors in building the North river bridge are not going to take the first engineer who comes along with promises of this sort or that.

Roebeling built the East river bridge, the greatest suspension bridge in the world; but not until he had successfully demonstrated his ability to do so by building bridges of the sort before.

The board of directors of the North river bridge will listen to no engineer whose experience, knowledge and character are not well known to them.

sure, it must be all the time earning adequate dividends for the insured.

The accumulation of this capital and handling it to the greatest earning capacity, demand the highest possible financial ability, as well as vast experience, if the capital be a great one.

There is no Life Insurance company in existence that has applied these two laws so successfully as the Mutual Life of New York.

The man who desires to purchase the factor of safety at precisely the right cost—neither too cheap nor too dear—fails to do so who fails to insure in the Mutual, and for these two reasons among many others: First, because it has the largest capital in the world; secondly, because in proportion to the cost of its premiums, it is simply a matter of record that it makes the greatest percentage of actual returns to its policy-holders.

In short, in proportion to the amount of money that it has received or is receiving today, it has actually made the greatest returns to those who have taken its policies.

This fact is a fact of record, and persistently demonstrates that in the Mutual Life the safest and most inexpensive insurance is to be purchased.

No wonder, then, that in the course of Life Insurance history it has become the greatest financial corporation of the sort in the world. It proposes to remain so.

Its experience, knowledge and character are such as to make it certain that it will keep in the van for generations to come.

No new problems in Life Insurance will arise, nor any new conditions of advancing civilization present themselves for which it will not remain the best equipped Life Insurance corporation of the times, where security can be purchased at precisely the right cost.

got him off the even track and brought on a fresh attack of Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It was Simmons Liver Regulator that cured this time. It never fails. You want to keep it on hand also for any Bilious attack, or for Constipation. It is the emergency remedy, unlike pills in the effect. No gripings, and does not debilitate. Try it once.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, to tone the stomach and other organs, regulate the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me no good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." LETTERS FROM THE OLD WORLD.

Across Europe from Constantinople to London.

On the 16th of April we started on our return trip to London. The route was through Roumelia, Bulgaria, Serbia, Hungary, Austria, Germany, Belgium and Northern France. That we might see all the country we stopped off at night and traveled by day; at some of the stopping places we remained over one or two days—at Budapest, Vienna, Wels, Nuremberg, Frankfurt, Bonn and Brussels. The slow local trains were chosen so we could see more of the people; these trains would stop at every station and sometimes go 12 or 15 miles an hour. We could see the people at work in the fields and gardens, see how they did the work, see the horses, plows, carts and see how they used them; it was almost like walking through the country.

CITIES AND THEIR PECULIARITIES.

Budapest is a beautiful, interesting city and the Hungarians are a peculiar people. After seeing and looking in their faces I can understand why they and the Austrians do not harmonize; they are a distinct race from all others in Europe in shape of the head and form of the body, and will remain distinct for a long time. They came to Hungary a thousand years ago and came to stay.

Vienna is one of the large cities and very interesting to one well read in modern history. The various quarters show the period in which they were built; in the oldest quarters the houses were all built for defense, each one being a small fort with projecting gables from which the enemy could be harried; the more recent quarters take on modern style, with wide streets and tall buildings.

Wels is a small city that crystallized 500 years ago and does not change; will remain a living curiosity for generations. The habits of the people, the houses, shops, cars, big baskets carried on the head, the brick bake-ovens in the yard, all date from far back in the past.

Nuremberg is a city that has preserved its old walls and citadel in good condition; a part of the citadel dates back to the year 512. The arrangement inside the wall is interesting. There is one broad street through it into which all the others open; in this way, in case of danger, the women and children had a straight run to the citadel. As the city grew and extended outside the citadel radiated from the gates; in case of sudden attack the people had a straight run to the gates. It was the only city I ever saw where there was no chance to get lost. There were open air markets on one street that had not changed in any material way for hundreds of years; women largely control and manage them.

We stopped two days at Frankfurt and were very much interested in its zoological garden and parks. In the garden were two full sized horned horses, the first ones I had ever seen, also a full sized polar bear; the large ostrich of New Zealand was very interesting; this fowl now being nearly extinct.

Our next stop was in Bonn. We were pleased with the city, especially its shady avenues and its grand old trees, though the drinking water was the worst we had found. The hotel men here were, or tried to be, extortionate in their bills, but J. L. got the better of them. The general appearance of the people is a good average for German cities, and the valley around is very beautiful.

Our last stop was at Brussels, where we enjoyed a two days' ramble amid the activity and splendid specimens of man and womanhood, sometimes amusing ourselves with reading the names over the shops, four-fifths of which can be seen in any American city. The whole city and people reminded me of Cincinnati and St. Louis. Brussels looks American and Cincinnati looks Belgian. There are more men at home in Spain city than any we visited, the military subscription is less severe and oppressive.

AFRICA SELECTIVE.

In looking back over our trip across Europe from east to west it is one continuous picture of beauty and charming scenery. I shall not forget the broad, beautiful valley of the Danube, the wide plains of Hungary and Austria, reminding me of Iowa and Nebraska, and the grand rolling hills and broad fields of Germany, at one time reminding me of Eastern Pennsylvania and Maryland, and then of Central Ohio and Indiana. The vast, green forests that are growing up in Germany, mostly pine, reminded me of our Southern forests, though more beautiful, being well kept. It was a joy to see the well cultivated fields and gardens and to note the many devices used to economize space. In many places fruit trees were trained like vines to the sides and ends of the buildings, the limbs being spread out wide and fastened to the wall. In many potato patches stakes were driven in the ground and boxes set on them with tomatoes and other things in them. Cucumber, squash and other vines are made to run up the side of walls and on the tops of out buildings. Everywhere in everything there were signs of thoughtful, wise economy. It was interesting to see land that had been under cultivation continuously for 2,000 years, and still very productive.

AFRAID OF DYNAMITE.

When we crossed the frontier into France the whole train was examined, every crack and crevice, for dynamite. The right to search all baggage and persons was also demanded, though we were not troubled. A gray headed revenue officer came up and looked us sharply in the face, then made a chalk mark on our bundles and passed us on. With some there were high words and bluster, but finally we passed on in safety.

There were various apprehensions of outbreaks and dynamiting on May Day all through Europe, more in France than elsewhere. The parade here in London on May Day was immense. No estimate that I have heard was less than 500,000. They assembled in Hyde Park, and in the early morning the authorities were very uneasy, but when they saw thousands of women and children thronging the streets on their way to the park, their fears were gone. They rightly reasoned that men bent on an outbreak would not want their wives and children there.

The day passed off quietly and by 8 p. m. the park was clear, and everybody breathed freely and slept soundly that night.

Outside of Constantinople I have not felt any fear of personal danger and have been almost invariably kindly treated. Many of the tourists whom we met and traveled with were astonished to find us unarmed. Even the ladies in many cases were armed and ready for battle, and some of them looked like they would be really to encounter in a fray.

AS TO LONDON.

The more we see of it the more it expands in its vastness. We have made brief visits to the Tower, Kew Gardens, Westminster Abbey, British Museum, National Gallery, old London bridge, Devonshire House, the Institute for improved cooking, etc., etc., which is scarcely a beginning of what there is to be seen.

The people themselves afford the most interesting subject of study for me. I never tire of watching the great crowds go by, and reading their faces as they pass.

At this date, May 10th, in addition to the places mentioned, we have visited Black Friars Bridge, Horticultural Exhibition and Kensington Museum.

It would be impossible for me to describe these celebrated places in an intelligent manner.

In the British Museum there are thousands, if not tens of thousands, of objects of interest; the Kensington Museum is the overflow of the other and equally interesting. The historian and antiquarian can have a continued feast for years.

The Kew Garden is a wonder in the way of tropical trees, flowers, plants and creepers, and in the park the woodland scene is almost equal to the glory of the Indiana forests.

Westminster Abbey is another place for a historian, if one can hold his temper at seeing monuments of cruelty ennobled and buried by the side of the noble and good. The entire building is vast in design and has been beautiful but has lost its time and shine.

The more I see of such buildings the more beautiful the Mosque of Omar becomes in comparison.

The Tower is a massive old prison truly belonging to the dark ages, and has but little of interest aside from its connection with historic events, its many legal murders, assassinations and cruel imprisonments.

The collection of arms and armor of the middle ages is very large and interesting, the old block and ax of execution are still there, also the instruments of torture.

The crown jewels are kept in a strong room guarded by soldiers; they are immensely valuable and are beautiful, yet of no value in their present form. The old mule is 100 feet wide and 35 feet deep; the outer bank is planted in trees which make fine shade, the bottom is leveled off nicely and boys fourteen years old and under are permitted to go there and play. There were hundreds playing while I was there and I enjoyed the sight of the playground more than the gloomy sights and memories inside.

That time when we drove in a hack from Truckee to Lake Tahoe there was a reflection of the mountain in one of the pools in the river which impressed me as the most beautiful picture of the kind which I ever saw and I remember it well. There is a painting in the Horticultural Hall 400 feet long and 80 feet high, of a landscape that is next to the picture in Truckee river, excelling by far any other artificial production yet seen. I had to sit down in front and draw the picture on my memory, and then sit again to fill myself with its beauty.

There are many other large pictures very beautiful, especially an ocean scene, in which it appears so real we imagine the waves are really in motion, and a spouting fountain near by, out of sight, makes the exact sound of the surf on the shore.

They have double decked or two-story street cars and omnibuses here, the upper story twelve feet from the pavement; the ascent is made by spiral steps. It is a grand thing to ride on top on clear days to see the city. Sometimes we ride many miles in this way. When we are in a hurry we take underground or overhead railways. It is wonderful to see the amount of travel here. I counted the number of trains that came into one station in fifteen minutes; there were twenty-two, and all were well filled. There are fifty streets here that are as thronged as any one in San Francisco. The longest ride in a straight line was eight miles, and we did not get out of the city. The people here call an area about five miles long and four wide the city; the other portion "without" or outside. Nearly all the inhabitants go to bed between 10 and 12 o'clock p. m., and get up between 7 and 8 a. m.

This bad way of doing keeps me in trouble. I have to get up at 5 a. m., and get tired and hungry before breakfast. I have become accustomed to the food, and would do still if it could be had at the right time. Still you need not think I am in any great trouble; it does for me to be so old when with Americans.

SUFFRAGE BILL AND THE SALVATION ARMY. Buffalo Bill is here now, and is capturing the English with his nonsense. It is amazing how ignorant and glibly a certain class are, and what outrageous ideas concerning America they get by looking at Buffalo Bill's humbug.

I took one walk through the Indians' camp, and could hardly restrain my disgust at seeing the gaping crowd standing around.

In striking contrast to this I witnessed a procession of the Salvation Army led by an excellent band. All but the band were women and children. Right in front were about twenty little girls from five to seven years old, walking in a line, keeping step like veterans, with bright faces and sparkling eyes, happy as birds. There were crowds standing on the sidewalk to see them go by, and a crowd followed behind; there was not a disrespectful look, word or act by any one. Conversing with bystanders I learned that everybody now looks upon the army as a grand success for good in its way of working. The headquarters of the Army is a fine imposing building, and is not in a corner.

• Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

After school hours the streets are alive with little children; in the quiet places they are running and romping about like children the world over. Though they seemed to be out alone, without any restraint, in looking around the corner into half open doors and gates I could see the fond and watchful eyes of many a mother or older sister ready to lend a helping hand to the little ones.

No sound comes more gladly to my ears than the sound of the children at play, and it keeps me from getting homesick.

A BIG MEAT MARKET.

One day we called at the city meat market, and we were astonished at the amount there was on hand; the market covers two blocks. At first we tried to count the carcasses of beefs, sheep and pigs, but soon got into thousands and hardly made a beginning. We then began guessing by the carcasses, but failed in that, so we guessed by the score and then failed. It was the wholesale market, and there are 4,000,000 of people to feed every day.

There was meat from America, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and the Argentine Republic, all in good condition. There were twice as many sheep as all others together. There were some immense breeds, specially fed near the city. Whole shiploads of dressed mutton come from Queensland, and look fresh and clean. A large amount of bacon is in half hogs; the hog has been split open on the back, bone taken out, head and legs cut off, and then salted and cured; this kind seems to be in demand. We tried to follow a vegetable garden to the far end, but gave it up at the end of a mile.

It is so with many other things; everything is on a vast scale. The wonder is how so many thousands live; what they find to do. There are hundreds of thousands on the streets every day—come from somewhere and go somewhere. The number of strangers who come and go each day amounts to thousands. To see London is to see a big thing. "Tis paying me well, and I think every English speaking person in the world should thank the Lord for England. It is now the great balance wheel of the world. "All the world comes to London to trade."

ROUTES FOR THE FUTURE.

We have matured our proposed routes for the future, which will finish our tour. Going north it will be thus: London to Amsterdam, Bremen, Hamburg, Copenhagen, Stockholm, Christiania, Haparanda, Ulsborg, Kazla, Vilborg, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Berlin, Bonn and Geneva, Mar-sailles, Barcelona, Madrid, Gibraltar, Lisbon, Valadalis, Bordeaux, Tours, Paris, London.

CANDELARIA.

Strange Facts From South Esmeralda. "Hard Up," writing to the JOURNAL from Candelaria says: "The Census Marshal, in enumerating the children of school age in this district, found two families, one consisting of husband, wife and child, and the other of husband and wife, all of whom he returned as school children. "Esmeralda offers a fine field for missionary work, as there is not a preacher in the whole county. I would suggest that Reno send down a contingent of her Salvation Army."

"There are but three boys under 21 years of age in Candelaria who use tobacco and they are not attendants at school."

The new pipe organ has been put in place and will be used this morning after a special benediction service. The committee of experts appointed to examine the organ have pronounced it to be a first class instrument, with a tone exceedingly sweet. Mrs. Porter will assist the vested choir. The organist will be Mrs. B. F. Layton. The Rector, Wardens and Vestrymen extend a very cordial invitation to the citizens of Reno to be present at the opening services.

MILOR

A Recipe for Cleaning Furniture.

Now is house cleaning time, some housewife may be looking with a half satisfied air at her clean house, filled with pieces of dingy looking furniture, who, if she must depend upon limited means and herself for results, might be pleased with a recipe that I have used with good results.

Take of boiled oil four ounces, turpentine two ounces; put in a large mouthed bottle and shake well. Then add two ounces of muriatic acid, shake well again, let stand three days, always shaking before using; apply with old cotton flannel sparingly, then rub hard and quickly, and you get a nice polish. Then if her carpets and leunges have grown old and faded looking, and cannot be replaced by new ones, make over, she may brighten them up wonderfully by taking a bucketful of warm rain water in which is a generous portion of beef's gall, say a half pint; use a large flannel cloth, wring out of the water very frequently, and go all over the article until thoroughly cleaned.

The beef's gall can be gotten of any butcher, and should be placed in a quart of alcohol to cut it. It may be used as needed, and may be replenished for a time by adding more alcohol as the first quantity is used off.—Home Magazine.

Nine Women Lawyers.

The second annual graduating exercises of the Women's Law class of the University of the City of New York took place on a recent evening at the University building. An address was delivered by Professor Cephas Brainerd, of the university, on the study of law by women. Four members of the graduating class read essays as follows: "Our Sphere," Miss Irene S. Lowenstein; "University of Law," Mrs. Francis P. Smyth; "Why Did We Study Law," Miss Ida C. Bracher, and "Women and Law," Miss Lizzie Alderico.

Chancellor McCracken then presented the members of the graduating class, nine in number, with the certificates which they had won. Mrs. Leonard Weber, president of the Women's Legal Education society, then delivered an address to the class, which completed the exercises of the evening. The graduates were Misses Lizzie Alderico, Ida C. Bracher, Louise Lamb, Elizabeth Lawton, Irene S. Lowenstein, May E. Maxwell, Mrs. Francis P. Smyth, Mrs. Frank Sperry and Mrs. C. A. Van Bell.—New York Advertiser.

Sterilized Milk for the Sick Poor.

A committee of public spirited women in this city has undertaken an interesting experiment. With the active cooperation of the Good Samaritan dispensary, at Essex and Broome streets, these women have been trying to teach tenement house inmates how to guard their little ones against the forms of disease peculiar to the heated term of the year.

Many of these forms of sickness have their origin in germs contained in the daily supply of milk. To kill these germs is the object, and the result of a process known as sterilizing. The sterilizing machine is expensive, however, and the sterilizing of milk, even on a wholesale scale, adds to its cost.

To remove this obstacle and bring sterilized milk within the reach of the poor people, the women's committee purchased a sterilizing plant last summer at an expense of $400. It supplied 45,000 bottles of the milk to 575 sick children during the summer, and it proposes to continue the good work this year.—New York Letter.

For Mothers and Their Children.

The board of lady managers proposes to erect near the Women's building at the fair a children's home or comfort pavilion for mothers and children. It is proposed to raise the sum required for maintaining and building this refuge, where children can be well cared for while their parents view the exposition, by subscription; and the collection of funds in the different states is progressing well. The managers are desirous of obtaining a full list of all organizations conducted by women for charitable, intellectual, philanthropic, sanitary, industrial and moral reforms.

England has a carefully compiled volume of such statistics regarding women's work, but no record has been made as yet in this country. Women have been signally honored in the preparations for the fair, and are very successful in the progress of the work in their department.—Exchange.

Planting Sweet Peas.

Those who wish to enjoy a great pleasure in the summer would do well at this season to start a sweet pea plantation. A small area set aside for the purpose, well dug and fertilized, and planted in rotation like the regular garden peas, will give a plentiful yield of these lovely flowers which are deservedly such great favorites. By planting a row every week from now until July they will last all summer. As they grow they should be "bushed" in the same way as their utilitarian sisters; and while you are about it keep a corner of your ground for some scarlet runner beans, which are grown on poles like the other beans.—New York Tribune.

Maine Soldiers Going to the Capital.

Health post, G. A. R. of Gardiner, Me., will go in style to the national encampment in Washington in September. The members have chartered the steamboat Kennebec, a seagoing side wheeler of 1,653 tons, to take them and their friends to the number of 400 on a ten days' trip, allowing four days at Washington.

Our dear little daughter was terribly sick. Her bowels were bloated as hard as a brick. We feared she would die.

"German Syrup"

A Throat and Lung Specialty.

Those who have not used Boschee's German Syrup for some severe and chronic trouble of the Throat and Lungs can hardly appreciate what a truly wonderful medicine it is. The delicious sensations of healing, easing, clearing, strength-gathering and recovering are unknown joys. For German Syrup we do not ask easy cases. Sugar and water may smooth a throat or stop a tickling—for a while. This is as far as the ordinary cough medicine goes. Boschee's German Syrup is a discovery, a great Throat and Lung Specialty. Where for years there have been sensitiveness, pain, coughing, spitting, hemorrhage, voice failure, weakness, slipping down hill, where doctors and medicine and advice have been swallowed and followed to the gulf of despair, where there is the sickening conviction that all is over and the end is inevitable, there we place German Syrup. It cures. You are a live man yet if you take it.

Care of House Plants.

Do not let plants that have blossomed through the winter, and which you intend to use another season in the house, go on blossoming. See that they get at their summer's work as soon as possible. That work is to rest. Encourage them to do nothing but recuperate. Do not give rich soil or large amounts of water, for these encourage vigorous growth. You want the plants to remain as nearly dormant as is consistent with health. Cut back well. Prune into something like symmetrical form and keep watch of them as growth is made. Pinch back whenever it seems necessary to do so to secure good form.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Brave War Nurse.

Mrs. Sarah J. Richards, whose notable services as surgeon general's nurse in charge of field hospitals of the Second Army corps during the war, won the warm praise of the several commanders of the Army of the Potomac and the devotion of the soldiers, died at Philadelphia recently in her seventy-second year. She was one of the first to respond to Governor Curtin's call for nurses in 1862, and she stood at the front till the end. It is related of her that in one battle she prevented the capture of an ambulance full of soldiers which she was driving by drawing a revolver on the leader of the attacking party.

A Sneeze That Didn't Scare the Girl.

A sneeze betrayed a burglar in Pittsburg. He had secreted himself in the cellar of a residence, intending to begin his explorations for plunder after the family had retired. The family were preparing for bed and the girl entered the cellar to rake the furnace. She caused such a dust that the burglar could not repress a sneeze. The girl heard it, but went on quietly with her work. Then she slowly passed up stairs and cautiously announced her discovery to her mistress. Both of them bravely entered the cellar, pounced upon the burglar and held him until a policeman was summoned.—Yankee Blade.

Tore Up a Will That Gave Her $10,000.

Some six months ago Arend Arends, a well to do farmer, hanged himself because pretty Mary Van Hove, a neighbor's daughter, did not return his love. Arends left a will, in which he bequeathed his farm and possessions, valued at $10,000, to Mary. Wednesday she came into court in response to a summons, but positively declined to file the will for probate, dramatically tearing up the document before the astonished eyes of the relatives and renouncing her claims in favor of Arends' mother, who resides in Reynolds county, Mo.—Lincoln (Neb.) Cor. St. Louis Republic.

Fashions in Dress Goods.

Fashions come around in cycles; in fact, their periods are as regularly irregular as those of the comets. The "pean de soie," otherwise "sheen of silk," so much in vogue this last year or two, is but the "paduasoy" in which great-grandmothers delighted to array themselves. Satin elms and flows with the sea. Moire hath its season when it is unseasonable, stripes come and go, but silk goes on forever. The use of it increases yearly, and it is safe to say that the consumption will double in the next twenty years.—Chicago Tribune.

Against the Sweeping Druses.

The sanitary board of Hungary has instituted a crusade against the trained skirt, and has petitioned the home minister to forbid the wearing of this pernicious sweeping apparatus in the public streets. The prohibition has been carried out in some of the cities, the authorities claiming that the spread of tuberculosis, typhus and other maladies is greatly increased by the sweeping up of dry dust containing disease germs and conveying the germs from street to street.—Paris Letter.

An Unlucky Locomotive.

Engineer Knowblow, of the Erie, has finally agreed to preside at the throttle of engine No. 670 of that road. This is the machine that passed through the two terrible wrecks on that road at Ravenna on July 8 and at Kent on Sept. 30. When it came out of the Meadville shops recently none of the boys wanted to sit at the right hand side of the cab in the unlucky engine, and it was only after considerable persuasion that Engineer Knowblow was persuaded to take charge of the hoodooed locomotive. Railroaders are like sailors—they have their superstitions, and an engine man no more likes to run an unlucky machine than does an old tar to sail on certain unfortunate vessels.—Pittsburg Post.

From London to Chicago for $125.

Tours suitable to all pockets are being arranged by the London Polytechnic Young Men's Christian Institute. A yachting trip to Norway, lasting three weeks, and including a visit to the land of the midnight sun, is to cost only $19 15c.; the island of Madeira can be visited for $12, while $7 5c. will cover the expense of sixteen days in the Bernese Highlands. There is also to be a trip to the Chicago World's fair, costing only twenty-five guineas from Liverpool.—London Tit-Bits.

A Maine Woodpile.

The most wonderful woodpile on record is owned by a man in Oxford county, Me. In the pile of eight cords, all cut from one piece of forest, are no fewer than twenty different kinds of wood, viz., white birch, yellow birch, white maple, rock maple, white ash, brown ash, black cherry, wild cherry, apple tree, elder, beech, moosewood, willow, fir, dogwood, spruce, sugar plum, elm, poplar and hemlock.

The Joker is at Large.

J. C. Young, of Albany, has two wooden legs. A fool friend, who could think of no other way to be funny, tried to throw a knife into one of his legs. He succeeded, but it struck above the knee where the leg was flesh and blood. Mr. Young is now nursing an ugly and painful wound. The fool friend isn't in jail, but he ought to be.—Portland Oregonian.
